Stream Office 365 journal data to your Azure Tenancy for compliance

Journaling, or its equivalent, is still a necessity for many companies in regulated industries, especially Financial Services.

Email communications are one of many different communication mechanisms that may be required to be journaled.

However, as companies have moved their live email system to Office 365, many have found that, unlike journaling on premise, Office 365 does not allow journaling.

So what can companies do to ensure compliance?

Live Journaling for Archive2Azure works in conjunction with Office 365 and the customer's Azure tenancy to provide a fully compliant journal folder that retains and manages all journal data - including all metadata, to ensure full compliance of SEC Rule 17 and MiFID II.

Compliant Storage

- Archive2Azure storage cabinets can be designated for journal storage
- All data/metadata and other journal envelope data is retained

Secure

- Granular user access controls and data encryption with the customer's keys
- Native integration with Azure AD, Azure RMS, and SharePoint

Search & Analytics

- Advanced A360 Search of your journal data
- A full data analysis capability is available for all stored data including your journaled data

Archive2Azure with Live Journaling enables you to:

- Meet SEC Rule 17 and MiFID II journaling and immutable storage requirements
- Reduce compliance costs by utilizing your Azure tenancy for your journal data
- Choose the most appropriate storage tiers Hot, Cool, and Archive
- Geographically replicate you compliance data per regulatory requirements
